Is Class Being Disturbed When The Internet Doesn't Work?

The schools are introducing digital learning resources, more on-line teaching and in general, increasing digital teamwork. More than ever, teachers and students are depending on the internet to complete classes with efficiency.

Teachers and students are often interrupted during class, because the internet is slow or maybe doesn't work at all. Teachers get frustrated and the students lose focus. The result is impaired teaching and less learning.

Therefore, the schools' challenges are to ensure that the load on their internet connections do not impair the teaching when many active users simultaneously, are on the internet.

With SmartShare you can avoid interruptions and delays during classes – also when many users simultaneously are on the internet. Students, teachers and employees are allowed to work efficiently and immerse themselves without interruptions.

With SmartShare:

- you get more time for teaching
- the work efficiency is increased
- you get a stable internet and exploit your bandwidth optimally
- peer-2-peer applications can no longer be the cause of overload on the internet connection
- you save money and resources on troubleshooting and maintenance of the internet
- you can set time controllers filters for the web when having exams

SmartShare can be connected to all types of network.
